Extracts from the late writings of an English
Divine.

A serious application to the studies of the prophecies, and an attentive observation of the signs of the times, have produced in my mind the strongest persuasion, that the utter downfall of papacy, the final overthrow of despotism, the restoration of the Jews, and the renovation of all things, are near at hand : and that every year will astonish us with new wonders.

My mind has of late been much affected with the appearances of things in the christian world, and with the occurrences which have, within these few years, burst upon us.—Occurrences which are unparelled in the history of nations

Extract from the Rev. Christopher Love's prophecy—written in the year 1651.

“GREAT earthquakes and commotions by sea and land shall come in the year of God 1779.—Great wars in Germany and America in 1780.—The destruction of popery, or Babylon's fall in the year 1790.—God will be known by many in the year 1795.—This will produce a great man—The stars will wander and the moon turn as blood, in 1800.—Africa, Asia, and America will tremble in 1803—A great earthquake over all the world, in 1805—God will be universally known by all : then a general reformation, and peace for ever, when the people shall learn war no more—Happy is the man that liveth to see this day !”

The Empty Gun.

As Dick and Tom in fierce dispute engage,
And face to face the noisy contest wage ;
‘ Dont cock your chin at me,’ Dick smartly cries.
‘ Fear not ; his head’s not charg’d,’ a friend replies.

Observations necessary in the choice of FRIENDS.

NOTHING contributes more to the Happiness of Life than Friendship ; but if the Understanding does not direct the Heart, Friends are more proper to disturb than please us, and more capable of hurting than serving us. Nothing disturbs our Repose so much as Friends, if we have not judgment enough to choose them well. Importunate Friends make us wish they were indifferent ; the Morose give us more Uneasiness by their Humour than they do us good by their services ; and the Imperious tyrannize over us.

FABLES.

The FATHER and JUPITER.

THE Man to Jove his suit preferr'd !
He begg'd a wife his pray'r was heard,
Jove wondered at his bold addressing,
For how precarious is the blessing !

A wife he takes and now for heirs,
Again he worries heav'n with pray'rs.
Jove nods assent. Two hopeful boys
And a fine girl rewards his joys.

Now more solicitous he grew,
And set their future lives in view ;
He saw that all respect and duty
Were paid to wealth, to power, and beauty.

Once more, he cries, accept my Prayer,
Make my lov'd progeny thy care :
Let my first hope my fav'rite boy,
All fortune's richest gifts enjoy.
My next with strong ambition fire,
May favor teach him to aspire,
Till he the step of pow'r ascend,
And courtiers to their idol bend.

With ev'ry grace, with ev'ry charm,
My daughter's perfect features arm.
If heav'n approve, a father's blest,
Jove smiles, and grants his full request.

The first a miser at the heart,
studious of ev'ry griping art,
Heaps hoards on hoards with anxious pain,
And all his life devotes to gain.
He feels no joy, his cares increase,
He neither walks nor sleeps in peace,
In fancy'd want (a wretch complete)
He starves, and yet he dares not eat.
The next to sudden honors grew,
The thriving arts of courts he knew ;
He reach'd the heights of pow'r and place,
Then fell a victim of disgrace.

Beauty with early bloom supplies
His daughters cheek, and paints her eyes ;
The vain coquette each suit disdains,
And glories in her lover's pains !
With age she fades, each lover flies,
Contem'd; forlorn, she pines and dies.

When 'Jove the father's grief survey'd
And heard him Heav'n and Fate upbraid,
Thus spoke the God—By outward show
Men judge of happiness and woe :
shall ignorance of good and ill
Dare to direct th' eternal will ?
seek virtue ; and of that possess,
To providence resign the rest.

The tame STAG.

AS a young stag the thicket past,
The branches held his antlers fast,
A clown who saw the captive hung,
Across the horns his halter flung.

Now safely hampered in the cord,
He bore the present to his lord ;
His lord was pleas'd : as was the clown,
When he was tipt with half a crown.
The stag was brought before his wife,
The tender lady begg'd his life.
How sleek's the skin ! how speck'd like ermine !
Sure never creature was so charming.

At first within the yard confin'd,
He flies and hides from all mankind ;
Now bolder grown, with fixt amaze
And distant awe presumes to gaze,
Munches the linnen on the lines,
And on a hood or apron dines ;
He steals my little master's bread,
Follows the servants to be fed ;
Nearer and nearer now he stands,
To feel the praise of patting hands,
Examines ev'ry fist for meat,
And though repuls'd disdains retreat,
Attacks again with levell'd horns,
And man, that was his terror, scorns.

Such is the country maiden's fright,
When first a soldier is in sight,
Behind the door she hides her face,
Next time at distance eyes the lace ;
She now can all his terrors stand,
Nor from his squeeze withdraws her hand ;
She plays familiar in his arms,
And ev'ry soldier hath his charms ;
From tent to tent she spreads her flame :
For custom conquers fear and shame.

Moral Reflection.

Little minds are too much disordered by little things ; great minds see all things and are disordered by none.

Of the MISERY of MAN.

(THE ambition and avarice of men are the only sources of their misery. Men covet all, and make themselves wretched by their desires of superfluities. If they would live in a plain simple manner, and be contented by satisfying their real wants, we should every where see plenty, joy, and concord.

For age and want
save while you may,
No morning sun
lasts thro' the day.

THRO' life the same dull round we tread,
Just from the window to the bed,
We "live to see and to be seen,
" Gaze on the world awhile, and then,
" We yawn, and stretch to sleep again."
